

Qi Healing for Joints & Bones Health

Arthritis is one of the big concerns for people when they are getting older, and many people are suffering because of this. Arthritis is a joint problem, with rheumatism being a more serious stage of this challenge.

If your posture is not good and you abuse your body without proper relaxation and nutrition, you could regress into arthritis, and to the more serious stage of rheumatism.

The rheumatism affects our joints but the serious part is that this contaminates the internal organs as well.

The reason for this health issue is not known yet, but the Body and Brain Healing energy principle for the reason is poor immune system function, when energy cannot circulate because of stress and lack of exercise.

Qi Healing for Joints and Bones is not only for people who have Arthritis. It is a preventative measure. More people are exposed to a lot of stress so the immune system gets weaker, and although medical science has improved, people have more of this rheumatism.

No exception.

Through smooth energy movements of Qi Healing, we will learn how to release tension in our joints, and purify stagnant energy, improving your condition if you are already affected by this, and minimizing your chances of being affected by this as you age.

Five Organs Harmonizing Training

Most of your physical health depends on the condition of your five organs. The key phrase for health is 'harmonious balance'. Traditionally in the orient, there are some principles related to the five organs, such as yin and yang, and the five elements.

Each organ (kidneys, liver, heart, stomach and lungs) has a unique energy condition that is different from the other organs. When we are born, our organs receive a harmonized energy balance, with each organ having its unique energy.

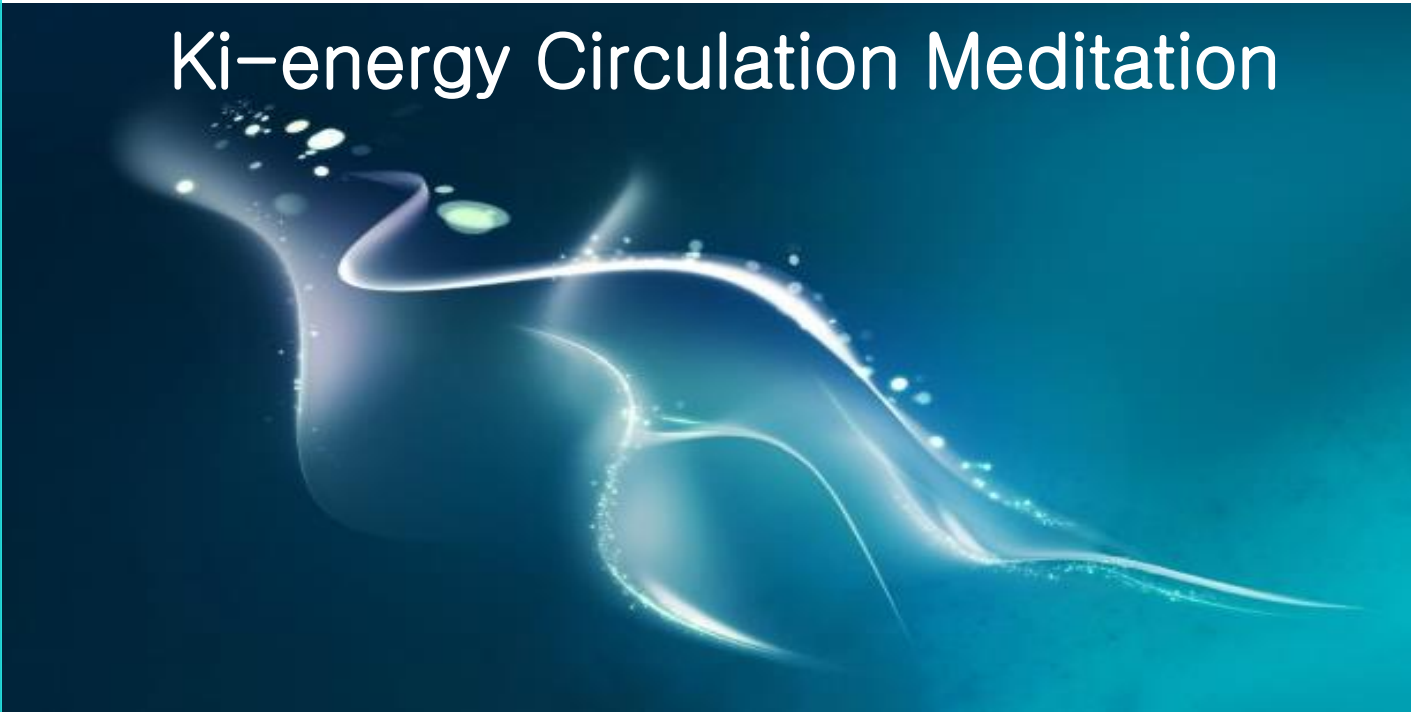

Because of our stressful and busy life, we have lost this balance of energy totally, and since each organ's energy affects our body condition and emotions, recovering the original energy of each organ is important to our health and happiness.

Each organ has a different energy name. Through chanting that energy name, we purify stagnant energy and negative emotions, bringing harmonious energy back to the organ system, and to the whole body.

The centre of our body is our Dahn Jon Energy Centre, so when the five organs energies circulate well, we can strengthen our Dahn Jon and then naturally, we can expand our consciousness, paying attention to others, and then recovering harmony with others through personal harmony inside.

Ki-energy Circulation Meditation

There are many different kinds of meditation. This is a meditation focusing on energy circulating throughout whole body, especially the conception and governor meridians.

Energy is the easiest way to focus our attention. When we focus on energy, our busy mind comes back to our body quickly and our mind calms down, especially when we focus on the meridians inside. That is why this is such a powerful meditation training.

We control energy with breath. Through this, we can practice energy training and meditation safely, and we will recover our health.

We can heal our body and mind and develop potential hidden power There are several steps in this circulation meditation.

It is like constructing a highway of energy.

Correct posture and movement is very important in improving your overall health but did you know that it is also directly affects your energy training?

Incorrect posture creates tension in your muscles and in your skeletal structure, causing suppression to the flow of energy and blood. This, in turn, makes it difficult to control our breathing and concentration of consciousness.

If you want to improve your Jo Shin (control of body), you need to release all tension from shoulder and hip joints. As these are major joints, we release tension first here, followed by all remaining joints.

When you are awakened to the profound and true principle of Jo Shin, you will find it very easy and natural to control your Jo Shik (breath) and your Jo Shim (mind).
